Real-time Social Communications For Your Business

IBM Sametime products integrate real-time social communications into your business environment, providing a unified user experience through instant messaging, online meetings, voice, video and data. With just one click, you are instantly connected to the person behind the information, helping to meet the ongoing demands of everyday business.

IBM Sametime now represents the next generation of real-time social communications software, showcasing a simplified user interface for desktop, web and mobile clients and delivering high definition, real-time communications.

IBM Sametime supports social communications with features that include:

- Enterprise instant messaging, online presence indicators and community collaboration for instant connection to the people behind the information in your social business environment
- Online meetings that offer high-definition audio and video and document, application and screen sharing
- Mobile device support that connects you from anywhere, on a smartphone or tablet
- Voice and video integration for deployment within your business network with full support of industry standards
- A simple user experience and flexible platform that helps you integrate social communications into your processes and applications
